Catalogue of Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts in Dayr al-Suryān. Volume 1: Coptic and Arabic Biblical Texts; Coptic Language Resources, including Biblical Lexica. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium 677, Subsidia 139. Leuven: Peeters, 2020. [xxxvii + 428pp.]

The first volume of a multi-volume series. CCAMDS Volume 1 catalogues manuscripts in the Egyptian monastery Dayr al-Suryān, focusing on Coptic and Arabic biblical texts and Coptic language resources (101 MSS in total). The methodology of collecting information is comprehensive and includes the recording of call numbers and contents; dates, languages, scripts, and materials; scribes, patrons/owners, and restorers; tables of contents, colophons, and endowments; foliation and numbering systems, dimensions, area of writing, and lines per page; cover and condition; scribal practice and readers' insertions. The organization of Volume 1 is comprised of an introduction to the corpus, detailed manuscript entries, photographs of selected folia, and five appendices with indexes on numbering systems and contents; textual attestations; dates; material and watermarks; and prosopographical information.

Monasticism: A Very Short Introduction. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2018. [142pp.]

An introduction to monasticism in a global historical context, with special attention to Christian and Buddhist traditions. Chapters address the definition of monasticism; the diversity of monastic practices; monastic rules, social organization, and gender; saints' stories as sources of spirituality; the archaeology of monasteries and attitudes toward place; and the changing role of monasticism(s) in the contemporary world.

Christ Child: Cultural Memories of a Young Jesus. New Haven and London: Yale University Press, 2014. [417pp.]

- Finalist, American Academy of Religion Book Award for Excellence, Historical Studies Category (2015).

This book presents a history of interpretation related to the so-called Infancy Gospel of Thomas, known in antiquity as Paidika Iēsou, or the “Childhood Deeds of Jesus.” Applying sociologies of cultural memory to the transmission of these stories, I read Jesus’ childhood in relation to Graeco-Roman social practices in late antiquity and situate the Christ child’s reception in the context of medieval Jewish-Christian and Christian-Muslim encounter.

Coptic Christology in Practice: Incarnation and Divine Participation in Late Antique and Medieval Egypt. Early Christian Studies Series. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2008. [371pp.]

- Honorable Mention, British-Kuwait Friendship Society Book Prize in Middle Eastern Studies, British Society for Middle Eastern Studies (BRISME) (2009).

An investigation into the reception of Alexandrian Greek theology in Coptic and Copto-Arabic linguistic settings. Drawing on the insights of ritual and performance theory, I seek to elucidate the ways that Egyptian Christians have understood and enacted participation in Christ’s incarnation. Case studies include monastic literature, eucharistic liturgies, pilgrimage and the cult of the saints, visual encounters with church art and architecture, and the apologetic context of debate in Christian-Muslim encounter.

The Early Coptic Papacy: The Egyptian Church and Its Leadership in Late Antiquity. The Popes of Egypt: A History of the Coptic Church and Its Patriarchs from St. Mark to Pope Shenouda III, Volume 1. Cairo and New York: American University in Cairo Press, 2004. [251pp.]

- Samuel and Ronnie Heyman Prize for Outstanding Scholarly Publication, Yale University (2005).
- Arabic translation: Bābawāt Miṣr. (1) al-Bābawīyyah al-qibṭīyyah al-mubakkirah: al-kanīṣah al-miṣriyyah wa qāyādītuhā fī awākhir al-‘aṣr al-qadīm, trans. M. Girgis (Cairo: al-Markaz al-qawmī li-l-tarjamah, 2013).

This volume, the first in a three part series, examines the evolving role of the Alexandrian patriarchate from the first to the seventh century CE. Focusing on representations of the patriarchs in both literature and art, I argue that the identity of the Egyptian church and its leadership was shaped in late antiquity by the cultural discourses of apostolicity, martyrdom, monastic patronage, and theological resistance.

Be Thou There: The Holy Family’s Journey in Egypt (co-authored with W. Lyster and C. Hulsman; edited with an introduction by G. Gabra). Cairo and New York: American University in Cairo Press, 2001. [163pp.]

In this collaborative publication, I analyze ancient and early medieval evidence related to the story of Jesus, Mary, and Joseph’s flight into Egypt. Examining a range of sources—from the Gospel of Matthew to medieval Arabic homilies and vision narratives—I show how the practices of biblical interpretation and pilgrimage mapped loca sancta onto the Egyptian landscape.

The Cult of St Thecla: A Tradition of Women’s Piety in Late Antiquity. Early Christian Studies Series. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2001. [288pp.]

My first book investigates the devotional practices, social institutions, and material artifacts connected with a popular but controversial female saint in early Christianity. Marshalling literary, artistic, archaeological, papyrological, and epigraphic evidence from Asia Minor and Egypt, I reconstruct the role that communities of women played in the promotion of Saint Thecla’s cult.

Text Editions and Translations:

“The Arabic Canons of the Holy Father Anbā Shenoute: Introduction, Text, and Translation.” To appear in a yet-to-be-titled Festschrift. Leuven: Peeters, forthcoming. [65pp. in Word format]

The Feast of the Desert of Apa Shenoute: A Liturgical Text from the White Monastery (co-edited with Daniel Schriever and Mary Farag, with contributions by Samuel Moawad). Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium 681, Scriptores Coptici 53. Leuven: Peeters, 2020. [405pp.]

An edition and translation of a trilingual manuscript recording the rite of a medieval liturgical procession at the White Monastery in Upper Egypt, with two introductions. Primarily in Coptic, with selected sections in Greek and Arabic, the text includes rubrics of biblical passages and a sermon by Shenoute meant to be read at different points during the procession.

Revelation 1–3 in Christian Arabic Commentary: John’s First Vision and the Letters to the Seven Churches (co-authored and edited with T. C. Schmidt and Shawqi Talia). Christian Arabic Texts in Translation 1. New York: Fordham University Press, 2019. [172pp.]

An analysis and critical translation of two Christian Arabic commentaries on the Apocalypse of John, focusing on the interpretation of Revelation 1–3, John’s first vision and the letters to the seven churches. The translated texts are accompanied by chapters introducing the authors and their works, and touching on matters pertaining to their linguistic, literary, and historical contexts, including the cultural encounters between Arabic-speaking Christian communities and the wider Islamic world.

“An Arabic Acts of Paul and Thecla: Text and Translation, with Introduction and Critical Commentary.” In Thecla: Paul’s Disciple and Saint in the East and West, ed. J. W. Barrier, J. N. Bremmer, T. Nicklas, and A. Puig i Tàrrach (Studies in Early Christian Apocrypha; Leuven: Peeters, 2016), 106–51. [46pp.]

The first edition of the Acts of Paul and Thecla in Arabic, based on an eighteenth-century manuscript currently in the collection of the St. Shenouda the Archimandrite Society in Los Angeles.

A Disputation over a Fragment of the Cross: A Medieval Arabic Text from the History of Christian-Jewish-Muslim Relations in Egypt (co-authored and edited with B. Orfali and S. Noble). Beirut: Dar al-Machreq, 2012. [113pp.]

A critical edition and translation of a medieval Arabic literary debate related to the discovery of fragment of the cross. The jointly authored introduction situates this document in the context of medieval Christian-Jewish, Christian-Christian, and Christian-Muslim apologetics.

“On How to Discern the Truth of Religion,” by Ḥunayn ibn Ishāq. English translation (2009), available online at http://www.tertullian.org/fathers/sbath_20.1_Hunain_ibn_Ishaq.htm.

An English translation of an Arabic Christian treatise written in Baghdad during the ninth-century CE. Based on the text edition published by Samir Khalil Samir in the journal al-Mashriq 71.2 (1997), 345–63.

The Arabic Life of St. John the Little by Zacharias of Sakhā. Coptica 7. Los Angeles: St. Mark Foundation and St. Shenouda the Archimandrite Coptic Society, 2008. [185pp.]

An edition and translation of Göttingen MS Arabic 114, containing the Arabic Life of the early Christian monk, John the Little. My introduction to this edition situates this hagiographical work in the context of scribal and liturgical activity at the Monastery of St. John the Little in Wādī al-Natrūn, Egypt, where I oversee archaeological work sponsored by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project (YMAP).

Edited Volumes and Series:

Catalogue of Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts in Dayr al-Suryān (CCAMDS) (editor-in-chief, with Father Bigoul al-Suryānī). Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium, Subsidia. Leuven: Peeters, forthcoming.

A comprehensive catalogue of the Coptic and Arabic collections at Dayr al-Suryān in Egypt, to be published in multiple volumes covering the following genre categories: Biblical Texts, along with Coptic Grammars and Lexica; Commentaries and Canons; Theology; Ascetic Discourses; Saints’ Lives and Sermons; and Liturgical Texts. In addition to an introduction to the history and contents of the monastic library, this multi-volume work will collect data on approximately 1000 manuscripts, recording information on manuscript number and genre, works and contents, date, language, script, and material, scribes, patrons, and restorers, colophons and endowments, pages and numbering systems, dimensions, area of writing, and lines per page, cover and condition, and other details related to scribal practice and readers’ insertions. (For descriptions of individual published volumes, see above under “Books.”)

Articles:

“Deification in Evagrius Ponticus and the Transmission of the Kephalaia Gnostika in Syriac and Arabic.” To appear in Faith, Reason, and Theosis (Orthodox Christianity and Contemporary Thought; New York: Fordham University Press, forthcoming).

This study focuses on Evagrius Ponticus’ doctrine of the Holy Unity in his Kephalaia Gnostika, tracking how his conception of human participation in the divine was transmitted across two recensions in Syriac (one an expurgated version of the other) and into Arabic, based in part on two recently discovered Arabic manuscripts in the library at Dayr al-Suryān) in Egypt.

“Marginalia Coptica et Arabica: Traces of Scribes, Patrons, Restorers, and Readers in the Biblical Collection at the Monastery of the Syrians (Dayr al-Suryān).” To appear in Proceedings of the Eleventh International Congress of Coptic Studies, Claremont, CA, July 25th–30th, 2016 (Leuven: Peeters, forthcoming).

Based on my cataloguing work at the Monastery of the Syrians (Dayr al-Suryān) in Egypt, this article focuses on the Coptic and Arabic biblical manuscripts in that collection. In the study of library archives, the role of scribes, patrons, restorers, and readers has often been overlooked due to the fact that scholars have typically prioritized research into primary texts over the material history of the manuscripts themselves. This study seeks to correct that imbalance by looking at how writings “in the margins”—colophons, endowments, and prayers—provide invaluable evidence for tracing the history of textual practice in a monastic library.

“Archaeology at the Shenoutean Monastic Federation, 2010–2019: A Report on the Last Decade of YMAP’s Work” (with contributions by G. Pyke, et al.). To appear in Coptica 19 (2020).

A synopsis of the archaeological surveys and excavations, architectural documentation, and art conservation conducted at the White Monastery and its associated women’s monastery near Sohag, Egypt, from 2010 to 2019.

“Anastasia, Thecla, and Friends: Archaeological and Epigraphic Evidence from the Shenoutean Women’s Monastery at Atripe” (with contributions by G. Pyke, L. Blanke, W. Dolling, and A. Urcia). In Le Muséon 133.2 (2020), 259–287.

A report on recent archaeological work by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project (YMAP) at the site of the women’s monastery in Atripe (Upper Egypt), which was part of the Shenoutean monastic federation in late antiquity. This article focuses in particular on wall writings (dipinti) written by female monastics during the late sixth and/or early seventh centuries. These writings supply us with the names of a number of women within the community, confirm their ongoing reverence for Shenoute as “prophet and archimandrite” in the generations after his death, and shed light on local practices of table service and water distribution connected with the Refectory and an associated Six-Pillared Hall.

“Archaeological Evidence for the Study of Early Monasticism.” In the Oxford Handbook of Christian Monasticism, ed. B. Kaczynski (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2020), 101–120.

An introduction to early Christian monastic archaeology, including a discussion of methodological problems in archaeological practice and interpretation, and a reevaluation of material evidence for monastic sites from the first millennium CE.

“Manuscripts, Monks, and Mufattishīn: Digital Access and Concerns of Cultural Heritage in the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project.” In Ancient Manuscripts in Digital Culture: Visualisation, Data Mining, Communication, ed. C. Clivaz, D. Hamidović, and S. Savant (Digital Biblical Studies 3; Leiden: Brill, 2019), 70–83.

An article on the logistical and intercultural challenges of pursuing digitization initiatives in the context of conducting archaeological work in Egypt, including the ongoing legacy of colonialism as it impacts relationships between foreign missions, Coptic monks, and Egyptian government inspectors (mufattishīn).

“Evagrius Ponticus at the Monastery of the Syrians: Newly Documented Evidence for an Arabic Reception History.” In Heirs of the Apostles: The Story of Arabic Christianity, ed. D. Bertaina, S. Keating, M. N. Swanson, and A. Treiger (Leiden: Brill, 2019), 347–92.

An article that reports on seven Arabic manuscripts containing works of Evagrius Ponticus in the library at the Egyptian monastery Dayr al-Suryān in Egypt. After discussion the history of scholarship on Evagriana Arabica, I provide sample catalogue entries for each manuscript, documenting their contents, evidence for their dating, the identity of scribes and literary patrons, and selected aspects of their physical description.

“Cataloguing the Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts in the Monastery of the Syrians: A Preliminary Report.” In Studia Patristica 92 (2018), 179–85.

An initial report on the Project to Catalogue the Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts at Dayr al-Suryān (Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt), which I founded in 2013. It provides a summary of the contents of the collection, introduces our cataloguing method, and presents a case study focusing on an important thirteenth-century Coptic-Arabic manuscript. Published as part of the proceedings from The International Conference on Patristics (Oxford University, 2015).

“Curriculum Vitae et Memoriae: The Life of Saint Onophrius and Local Practices of Monastic Commemoration.” In From Gnostics to Monastics: Studies in Coptic and Early Christianity, ed. D. Brakke, S. J. Davis, and S. Emmel (Orientalia Lovaniensia Analecta 263; Leuven: Peeters, 2017), 383–91.

An article focusing on evidence for the Egyptian cult of Saint Onophrius from the White Monastery, the Fayyum Oasis, and Scetis (Wādī al-Naṭrūn), including discussion of a wall painting of Onophrius discovered during excavations at the Monastery of John the Little.

“Monastic Revivals.” In Melania: Early Christianity Through the Life of One Family, ed. C. M. Chin and C. T. Schroeder (Berkeley: University of California Press, 2016), 260–70.

This article explores the “afterlife” of Melania the Elder and Melania the Younger in the modern Coptic Orthodox Church. Using three Arabic sources as primary evidence—an audio recording of a homily by Pope Shenouda III, a history of monasticism by Matthew the Poor (Matta al-Miskīn), and a recent edition of the Paradise of the Fathers—I address the ways in which male church leaders have appropriated the Melanias as gendered models for Coptic nuns and female laity as part of a modern revival of monastic practice in Egypt.

“History and Historiography in Coptic Studies, 2004–2008.” In Coptic Society, Literature and Religion from Late Antiquity to Modern Times: Proceedings of the Tenth International Congress of Coptic Studies, Rome, September 17th–22nd, 2012, and Plenary Reports of the Ninth International Congress of Coptic Studies, Cairo, September 15th–19th, 2008, volume 1 (Orientalia Lovaniensia Analecta 247; Leuven: Peeters, 2016), 151–95.

A historiographical review and comprehensive bibliography of scholarship on Coptic history from 2004 to 2008. Areas of focus include: chronology and geography, Christianity and the survival of local Egyptian religion, continuity and change, memory and monasticism, church leadership and organization, histories of reception and practice (incl. theology and biblical interpretation), and Christianity under Islam.

“Architectural Conservation at the White Monastery Church (Dayr Anba Shinuda), Sohag” (co-authored with G. Pyke and N. Warner). In Bulletin of the American Research Center in Egypt 208 (Summer 2016), 34–41.

This short piece reports on conservation work conducted in the ancient church at the White Monastery in February 2015. The conservation work focused on two areas that had become structurally unsound within the church (the narthex wall and the south wall) and yielded discoveries that helped clarify the building’s architectural history.

“Liturgy and Ritual Practice in the Shenoutean Federation” (co-authored with U. Zanetti). In The Red Monastery Church: Beauty and Asceticism in Upper Egypt, ed. E. Bolman (New Haven: Yale University Press / American Research Center in Egypt, 2016), 27–35.

This jointly written piece explores the evidence related to the role that liturgical and ritual practices played in the lives of monks in the late ancient and early medieval Shenoutean federation, with special attention to drawing connections with the Red Monastery church and the figural images in its painted program.

“Shenoute in Scetis: New Archaeological Evidence for the Cult of a Monastic Saint in Early Medieval Wādī al-Naṭrūn.” In Coptica 14 (2015), 1–19.

An essay introducing and contextualizing a painted wall inscription, or dipinto, discovered during the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project excavations at the Monastery of John the Little in Wādī al-Naṭrūn. The text is a tenth-century prayer to St. Shenoute and as such it serves as new evidence for the cult of this monastic saint in medieval Scetis. I analyze the prayer in relation to already documented venues for local Shenoutean devotion, including liturgical practice, papal patronage, and hagiographical production.

“From Women’s Piety to Male Devotion: Gender Studies, the Acts of Paul and Thecla, and the Evidence of an Arabic Manuscript.” In Harvard Theological Review, 108.4 (2015), 579–93.

In this article, I address the role that gender studies has played in the interpretation of the early Christian Acts of Paul and Thecla, and I apply insights from this discipline to the analysis of an unpublished Arabic manuscript of that work copied by a scribe at the Monastery of St. Paul at the Red Sea in Egypt.

“Left Behind: A Recent Discovery of Manuscript Fragments in the White Monastery Church” (co-authored with G. Pyke, E. Davidson, M. Farag, and D. Schriever, with contributions by L. Blanke). In Journal of Coptic Studies 16 (2014), 69–87.

This article reports on a discovery of manuscript fragments made in the White Monastery church in December 2011. First, we describe the archaeological context, including the architecture of the “Candle Room,” and our methods of excavation, cataloguing, and photographic documentation. Second, we report on the data discovered, including the number of fragments, the materials used, the languages and scripts represented, patterns of ornamentation, and text types. Third, we present a case study focusing on one fragment identified as part of the Shenoutean corpus. Fourth and finally, we discuss implications for our knowledge about the textual and architectural history of the site.

“The Tomb of St. Shenoute at the White Monastery: Final Conservation and Documentation” (co-authored with E. S. Bolman, L. De Cesaris, A. Sucato, E. Ricchi, M. Kacicnik, S. M. M. Osman, A. Z. Aly, M. al-Anthony, G. Pyke, and A. Szymanska). In Bulletin of the American Research Center in Egypt 204 (Spring 2014), 21–24.

A brief report on the final stage of archaeological documentation on the tomb chapel associated with Shenoute at the White Monastery, including the commissioning of 360 degree photographic panoramas of the two underground chambers.

“The Category of Memory in Recent Scholarship on the Desert Fathers.” In From Old Cairo to the New World. Coptic Studies Presented to Gawdat Gabra on the Occasion of His 65th Birthday, ed. Y. N. Youssef and S. Moawad (Colloquia Antiqua 9; Leuven: Peeters, 2013), 59–76.

A critique of the way that the category of memory has been used in recent scholarship on Egyptian monastic literature such as the Sayings of the Desert Fathers, and a proposal for a more thoroughgoing methodological engagement with the interdisciplinary field of memory studies among historians of late antiquity.

“Completing the Race and Receiving the Crown: 2 Timothy 4:7–8 in Early Christian Monastic Epitaphs at Kellia and Pherme.” In Asceticism and Exegesis in Early Christianity, ed. H-U. Weidemann (Novum Testamentum et Orbis Antiquus; Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2013), 334–73.

The subject of this piece is the use of 2 Timothy 4:7–8 in two sets of monastic epitaphs found in monks’ dwellings at Kellia and Pherme in the Egyptian Delta. I evaluate these wall writings in the context of ancient consolatory, martyrological, and monastic rhetoric, as well as monastic funerary practice. Evidence considered includes wall paintings discovered in excavations conducted by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project.

“Life and Death in Lower and Upper Egypt: A Brief Survey of Recent Monastic Archaeology at Yale” (with contributions by E. Bolman, D. Brooks Hedstrom, and G. Pyke). In Journal of the Canadian Society for Coptic Studies 3 (2012), 9–26.

A brief survey of archaeological work sponsored by Yale University at the Monastery of St. John the Little (Wādī al-Naṭrūn) and at the White Monastery (Sohag) in Egypt, with a focus on evidence related to everyday life and to death and burial within these two Coptic monastic settings.

“Bird Watching in the Infancy Gospel of Thomas: From Child’s Play to Rituals of Divine Discernment.” In Portraits of Jesus: Essays in Christology, ed. S. E. Myers (Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2012), 125–53.

An article in which I investigate artifacts and practices related to childhood and birds as sites of cultural memory for early Graeco-Roman readers of the Infancy Gospel of Thomas.

“New Archaeology at Ancient Scetis: Surveys and Initial Excavations at the Monastery of St. John the Little in Wādī al-Naṭrūn (Yale Monastic Archaeology Project)” (co-authored with D. Brooks Hedstrom, T. Herbich, S. Ikram, D. McCormack, M-D. Nenna, and G. Pyke). In Dumbarton Oaks Papers 64 (2011), 217–27.

A report on surface and subsurface surveys completed at the Monastery of St. John the Little in Wādī al-Naṭrūn, and on the excavation of a monastic trash deposit at that site.

“The Tomb of St. Shenoute? More Results from the White Monastery (Dayr Anba Shenouda), Sohag” (co-authored with E. Bolman, L. De Cesaris, M. el-Anthony, G. Pyke, E. Ricchi, A. Sucato, and N. Warner, with contributions by M. Abdel Rahim, L. Blanke, W. Dolling, M. Khalifa, S. Mohammed, and A. Stevens). In Bulletin of the American Research Center in Egypt 198 (Spring 2011), 31–38.

A short article summarizing excavation and conservation work conducted since 2006 at a fifth-century funerary chapel at the White Monastery in Sohag, Egypt.

“Archaeology at the White Monastery, 2005–2010” (with contributions by L. Blanke, E. Bolman, et al.). In Coptica 9 (2010), 25–58.

A synopsis of the archaeological surveys and excavations, architectural documentation, and art conservation conducted at the White Monastery near Sohag, Egypt, from 2005 to 2010.

“Forget Me Not: Memory and the Female Subject in Ancient Binding Spells.” In Women and Gender in Ancient Religions: Interdisciplinary Approaches, ed. S. P. Ahearne-Kroll, P. A. Holloway, and J. A. Kelhoffer (Tübingen: Mohr Siebeck, 2010), 248–59.

Drawing on contemporary sociologies of memory in my analysis, I investigate the manipulation of women’s bodies and memories—and the resultant construction of a particular kind of female subject—in ancient Graeco-Egyptian magical spells.

“Shenoute and a Recently Discovered Tomb Chapel at the White Monastery” (co-authored with E. Bolman and G. Pyke). In Journal of Early Christian Studies 18.3 (2010), 453–62.

In this collaborative publication, my co-authors and I present archaeological, art historical, and epigraphic evidence related to a late antique monastic funerary chapel excavated by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Program in cooperation with the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities. On the basis of this evidence we conclude that the subterranean tomb beneath the chapel belonged to the famous fifth-century head of the White Monastery, Shenoute of Atripe.

“Variations on an Egyptian Female Martyr Legend: History, Hagiography, and the Gendered Politics of Medieval Arab Religious Identity.” In Writing ‘True Stories’: Historians and Hagiographers in the Late Antique and Medieval Near East, ed. A. Papaconstantinou, M. Debié, and H. Kennedy (Cultural Encounters of Late Antiquity and the Middle Ages 9; Turnhout: Brepols, 2010), 205–17.

In this article, I observe the way a female saint’s legend is adopted and adapted in three Arabic chronographies. Utilizing insights drawn from gender studies and postcolonialist criticism, I show how the body of the saint is used as a tool for negotiating social and religious boundaries between Muslims and Christians in medieval Egypt.

“Yale Monastic Archaeology Project: John the Little, Season 2 (May 14–June 17, 2007)” (co-authored with D. Brooks Hedstrom, G. Pyke, and D. McCormack). In Mishkah: The Egyptian Journal of Islamic Archeology 3 (2009), 59–64.

This brief article reports on 2007 surveys and excavations at the Monastery of John the Little in the Wadi al-Natrun, published in a journal sponsored by the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities.

“Yale Monastic Archaeology Project: Pherme (Qusur Higayla and Qusur ‘Erayma), Season 1 (May 29–June 8, 2006)” (co-authored with D. Brooks Hedstrom, T. Herbich, G. Pyke, and D. McCormack). In Mishkah: The Egyptian Journal of Islamic Archeology 3 (2009), 53–7.

This brief article reports on 2006 surveys at the monastic site of Pherme in the Egyptian Delta, published in a journal sponsored by the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities.

“Yale Monastic Archaeology Project: John the Little, Season 1 (June 7–June 27, 2006)” (co-authored with D. Brooks Hedstrom, T. Herbich, G. Pyke, and D. McCormack). In Mishkah: The Egyptian Journal of Islamic Archeology 3 (2009), 47–52.

This brief article reports on 2006 surveys and excavations at the Monastery of John the Little in the Wadi al-Natrun, published in a journal sponsored by the Egyptian Supreme Council of Antiquities.

“Jerome’s ‘Life of Saint Paul’ and the Promotion of Egyptian Monasticism in the West.” In The Cave Church at the Monastery of St. Paul, ed. W. Lyster (New Haven: Yale University Press/ American Research Center in Egypt, 2008), 25–41.

This contributed chapter investigates three contexts for the promotion of monastic values and the legacy of St. Paul of Thebes in the Latin West: 1) Jerome’s literary production of Paul’s vita; 2) late antique pilgrimage practice to Paul’s monastic cave near the Red Sea; and 3) the interpretation of Egyptian desert landscapes as arenas for sacred encounters in early modern Western art related to the saint.

“Introducing an Arabic Commentary on the Apocalypse: Ibn Kātib Qayṣar on Revelation.” In Harvard Theological Review 101.1 (2008), 77–96.

After an introduction to the Copto-Arabic commentary tradition on the Apocalypse of John, I focus specifically on Ibn Kātib Qayṣar’s theories of prophecy and vision in his interpretation of Revelation 1:1, demonstrating how this Arabic commentator adapts and elaborates on Greek and Latin cultural assumptions, as well as early medieval Islamic theories, related to visionary experience.

“A Geophysical Survey of Ancient Pherme: Magnetic Prospection at an Early Christian Monastic Site in the Egyptian Delta” (co-authored with D. Brooks Hedstrom and T. Herbich). In Journal of the American Research Center in Egypt 44 (2007), 129–37.

This article reports on geophysical (sub-surface) surveys conducted in 2006 by YMAP at the monastic site of Pherme in the Egyptian Delta.

“The Copto-Arabic Tradition of Theosis: A Eucharistic Reading of John 6:51-57 in Būlus al-Būshī’s Treatise On the Incarnation.” In Partakers of the Divine Nature: The History and Development of Deification in the Christian Tradition, ed. Michael J. Christensen and Jeffery A. Wittung (Madison, N.J.: Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2007), 163–74.

In my contribution to this edited volume, I show how the thirteenth-century Copto-Arabic theologian, Būlus al-Būshī, draws on Alexandrian patristic precedent and Islamic kalām convention in interpreting John 6 and developing a Christology of eucharistic participation.

“Fashioning a Divine Body: Coptic Christology and Ritualized Dress.” In Harvard Theological Review 98.3 (2005), 335–62.

Applying theories of ritual practice and the ritually constructed body to the study of early Christian dress, I propose that Coptic understandings of the Incarnation were enacted or performed through the wearing of tunics embroidered with images from the life of Christ.

“Biblical Interpretation and Alexandrian Episcopal Authority in the Early Christian Fayoum.” In Christianity and Monasticism in the Fayoum Oasis, ed. G. Gabra (Cairo: American University of Cairo Press, 2005), 45–61.

A study of the Egyptian Fayoum and its relation to the Alexandrian bishopric, this article uses the writings of Dionysius and Cyril of Alexandria to show how the allegorical method of biblical interpretation was used to reinforce structures of ecclesiastical authority in a specific geographical and cultural context.

“A Hermeneutic of the Land: Biblical Interpretation in the Holy Family Tradition.” In Coptic Studies on the Threshold of a New Millennium. Proceedings of the Seventh International Congress of Coptic Studies, ed. M. Immerzeel and J. van der Vliet (Leuven: Peeters, 2004), 329–36.

In this published paper, I explore the way that Egyptian interpretations of Isaiah 19 supported the promotion of Holy Family sites as sacred pilgrimage locales.

“Crossed Texts, Crossed Sex: Intertextuality and Gender in Early Christian Legends of Holy Women Disguised as Men.” In Journal of Early Christian Studies 10.1 (2002), 1–36.

Reexamining the corpus of transvestite saints legends from early Christianity, I apply poststructuralist theories of intertextuality to show how such legends participated in a multiplicity of cultural discourses that functioned to destabilize binary conceptions of gender identity.

“A Medieval Icon with Scenes from the Life of Christ and the Virgin in the Church of Saint Mercurius at Deir Abu Seifein, Old Cairo: An Interdisciplinary Approach” (co-authored with Z. Skálóva). In Bulletin de la Société d’archéologie copte 39 (2000), 211–38.

This jointly authored article publishes and documents a multi-paneled medieval icon preserved at Deir Abu Seifein in Old Cairo and evaluates its iconography in the light of contemporaneous Copto-Arabic homiletic practice.

“A ‘Pauline’ Defense of Women’s Right to Baptize? Intertextuality and Apostolic Authority in the Acts of Paul.” In Journal of Early Christian Studies 8.3 (2000), 453–59.

Calling attention to the use of Paul’s letters in the Acts of Paul, I argue that an intertextual allusion to 1 Corinthians 10 in the scene of Thecla’s self-baptism represents an attempt to ground that baptism in the apostolic authority of Paul’s teaching.

“Jonah in Early Christian Art: Allegorical Exegesis and the Roman Funerary Context.” In ARS Review 13.1 (2000), 72–83. ARS Review is the academic journal of the Australian Association for the Study of Religions.

In this study of early Christian visual art, I argue that four-scene representations of Jonah in the Roman catacombs and on Roman sarcophagi represent an allegorical expansion on previous Christian interpretations of the story—an allegorical re-reading designed to address concerns among grave visitors about the nature of the resurrected body.

“Namesakes of Saint Thecla in Late Antique Egypt.” In Bulletin of the American Society of Papyrologists 36 (1999), 71–81.

This article documents evidence for namesakes of Thecla in late antique Egyptian papyri and funerary inscriptions.

“Patronage and Architectural Adaptation in the Roman Cult of the Martyrs.” In Anistoriton, an online journal of History, Archaeology, and Art History. Available at <http://www.anistor.gr/english/index.htm>: under Essays, Vol. 3/1999 (E993. June 1999).

This essay examines episcopal patronage of the cult of the martyrs and the social relationship between patron bishops and their pilgrim clientele in late antique Rome.

“Pilgrimage and the Cult of Saint Thecla in Late Antique Egypt.” In Pilgrimage and Holy Space in Late Antique Egypt, ed. D. Frankfurter (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1998), 303–39.

Interpreting hagiographical accounts, archaeological data and artifactual evidence connected with the Egyptian pilgrimage city of Saint Menas west of Alexandria, I argue for the existence of a competing shrine dedicated to Saint Thecla in the vicinity.

CURRENT RESEARCH:

Projects:

Executive Director, Yale Monastic Archaeology Project (YMAP): <http://www.yale.edu/egyptology/ae.htm>.

As executive director of YMAP, I oversee archaeological work at late ancient and medieval Christian monastic sites in Egypt, as well as the professional field training of undergraduate and graduate students. Begun in 2006, the project has two geographic areas of focus: Lower and Upper Egypt. In Lower Egypt, YMAP-North has worked at Kellia-Pherme in the western Delta (2006) and at the Monastery of John the Little in Wādī al-Naṭrūn (Scetis) (2006 to present). In Upper Egypt, YMAP-South has worked at the White Monastery (2008 to present) and at the site of the associated women’s monastery at Atripe (2016 to present, in collaboration with the University of Tübingen). The fieldwork sponsored by YMAP has served as a venue for the training of graduate students in archaeological methods and the analysis of material culture.

Director and Editor-in-Chief, Project to Catalogue the Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts at Dayr al-Suryān (Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt).

As project director, I oversee editorial and archival work aimed at producing the first comprehensive catalogue of the Coptic and Arabic manuscripts in the historic library of Dayr al-Suryān in Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt. Begun in 2013 as an extension of YMAP-North, the project includes the on-site training of graduate students. The collection comprises well over eight hundred manuscripts, and the editors of the catalogue will document their contents, language, script, pagination, material, physical condition, dimensions, and layout, as well as historical data including dates, scribes and patrons, and other details connected with their endowment to the library. There are also ongoing conversations about the possibility of digitalizing the collection in the future. A multi-volume catalogue is currently in preparation.

Series, Books, and Articles:

Editor-in-chief (multi-volume series), Catalogue of the Coptic and Arabic Manuscripts in the Library of Dayr al-Suryān, Wādī al-Naṭrūn. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium (CSCO), Subsidia (Louvain: Peeters Press, forthcoming). Volume 1 is published. Volumes 2–4 are in press. Volumes 5–8 are in process.

A comprehensive catalogue of the Coptic and Arabic collections at Dayr al-Suryān in Egypt, to be published in multiple volumes covering the following genre categories: Biblical Texts, along with Coptic Grammars and Lexica; (2) Commentaries and Canons; (3) Theology; (4) Ascetic Discourses; (5–6) Sermons and Saints’ Lives; and (7–8) Liturgical Texts. In addition to an introduction to the history and contents of the monastic library, this multi-volume work will collect data on approximately 1000 manuscripts, recording information on manuscript number and genre, works and contents, date, language, script, and material, scribes, patrons, and restorers, colophons and endowments, pages and numbering systems, dimensions, area of writing, and lines per page, cover and condition, and other details related to scribal practice and readers’ insertions.

Editor-in-chief and co-author (book), Stephen J. Davis, Darlene Brooks Hedstrom, Gillian Pyke, eds., Dwelling in the Desert: The Archaeology of an Early Medieval Monastic Residence in Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt. In preparation. Volume slated to be published in Yale Egyptological Publications (YEP).

A comprehensive collaborative report on survey, excavation, and conservation conducted at the Monastery of St. John the Little in Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt, sponsored by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project (YMAP). The focus of this study is a ninth-century monastic residence featuring a program of figural paintings and painted inscriptions, as well as multiple kitchen installations. In addition to analysis of architecture and finds (including ceramics, painted plaster, glass, coins, and archaeobotanical and archaeozoological remains), the contributors raise important questions about how Egyptian monastic dwellings were marked as domestic spaces. As such, this mud-brick residence serves as a window into larger patterns of monastic and non-monastic social organization in the late ancient and early medieval Mediterranean world.

Editor-in-chief (book), Mennat-Allah El Dorry, Monks and Plants: A Study of Foodways and Agricultural Practices in Egyptian Monastic Settlements. In preparation. Volume slated to be published in Yale Egyptological Publications (YEP).

A monograph authored by archaeobotanist Mennat-Allah El Dorry based on work at the Monastery of John the Little sponsored by the Yale Monastic Archaeology Project (YMAP). The volume presents an in-depth analysis of macrobotanical remains discovered during the excavation of a ninth-century CE residence, with the goal of reconstructing plant-related activities at the monastic settlement. These findings are brought into conversation with textual, architectural, and ethnographic evidence to draw conclusions about the wider economic context of early medieval monastic life, including patterns of trade, labor, and agricultural production.

Author (article), “The Biblical and Ascetic Wisdom of Evagrius Ponticus in Arabic: Three Short Works in Imitation of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Songs.” In progress.

This article discusses three short works in Arabic attributed to Evagrius Ponticus that purport to imitate the style of biblical wisdom literature. In it, I revisit the contested question of authorship on the basis of their rhetorical patterns and ascetic program. Included are four appendices, in which I translate these works into English for the first time and provide comparative linguistic data from other Evagrian texts.

Author/editor (book), The Gnostic Chapters in Arabic: A Critical Edition and Translation of Evagrius Ponticus’ Kephalaia Gnostika. In progress.

This first critical edition and translation of Evagrius Ponticus’ Kephalaia Gnostika in Arabic is based on the only two complete copies of the text extant in that language, both preserved at Dayr al-Suryān in Wādī al-Naṭrūn, Egypt. The publication will include extensive notes on variant readings and the Arabic version’s relationship to the Syriac recension from which it was translated.
